

HSOC 591 Graduate Assistant - Teaching (GAT) Position – Fall 2024
Part-time (6 hrs per week, September – December 2024)
Bachelor of Health Sciences Program, Cumming School of Medicine

A half GAT position (102 hours) is available for HSOC 591 – Advanced Seminar in Health and Society. This undergraduate course provides a critical analysis of contemporary issues in Global Health.

The successful applicant will be mature, responsible, reliable, and able to meet deadlines. Preference will be given to candidates in their second year or higher of their masters or PhD program, preferably with a demonstrated interest in Global Health.

This position requires a graduate student with excellent writing skills (a writing sample may be requested) and the ability to provide constructive feedback on student work, including social media posts, critical reflections and written assignments. Outstanding organizational, verbal, and written skills are essential for success in this position. Global Health research experience and familiarity with Instagram are an asset.

This role supports Dr. Fabiola Aparicio-Ting in the following duties:

- Attending class in-person session on Wednesdays 9:00-11:50 am
- Grading course work in a timely manner
- Managing submissions of assignments and managing the course IG account
- Providing input on course content and assessment strategies
- Managing and facilitating student questions during lectures and outside of class
- Assisting with facilitation of in-class small group activities and discussions, as needed
- If the GAT desires, there is an opportunity to deliver a lecture or class session
- General course management

To apply, please send a completed BHSc GA(T) Application, a statement of interest, and CV to Dr. Fabiola Aparicio-Ting (feapartic@ucalgary.ca).

Application deadline: Wednesday, June 26, 2024