GA(T) Position – (1 Half)

MDSC 321 – Introduction to Immunology
Fall 2023 term
Bachelor of Health Sciences Program, Cumming School of Medicine

A Half GA(T) is available for Fall 2023 for MDSC 321 – Introduction to Immunology

Position Requirements:

A graduate student is needed for the MDSC 321 – Introduction to Immunology. This is a second-year undergraduate course, offered on main campus, which provides an intermediate level introduction to the components and functioning of the immune system in health and disease.

The successful applicant will be mature, responsible, reliable and able to keep to timelines; preferably in their 2nd year or higher of their Masters or PhD program, with a specialization in Immunology, Host-pathogen Interactions or Inflammation. Students in other specializations will be considered if they can demonstrate strong background knowledge in the immune system.

This position will require a graduate student with excellent writing skills (a writing sample may be requested), the ability to provide constructive feedback on student group projects and the ability to evaluate student responses in the form of exam grading.

The role of the GTA will be to support Dr. Craig Jenne in the grading of exams and student group work in MDSC 321, including:

- Meeting with and mentoring student groups within an online and in-person format
- Managing submissions of assignments
- Training for fair and consistent marking
- Keeping to the marking schedule in (one-week marking windows) for each of the course assignments

Interested students please send a completed BHSc GA(T) Application, a statement of interest and CV to:
