Newborn Hematology: Patient-Care, Advocacy, Research and Policy

Jillian Baker, MD, MSc, FRCPC

Associate Professor, The University of Toronto
Staff Physician, Departments of Pediatrics and Medicine, St. Michael's Hospital, Toronto
Associate Staff Physician, Division of Hematology-Oncology, The Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto

Objectives:

1. Explore the pillars of patient-care, advocacy, research and policy through the lens of Rh Hemolytic Disease of the Newborn (Rh Disease).
2. Explain the pathophysiology, and treatment of Rh Disease, as well as the global disparity of access to preventative measures.
3. Discuss local and global advocacy efforts, including those using the patient voice, to improve education and awareness using Rh disease as a model.
